Exercise 3 (Reading)

Read the text. Then, for each item, shade in the bubble next to the correct option.

My name is Amir and I live with my small family in Muscat. Unfortunately, my father died in 2017 and I was still eighteen years. Then, I found myself responsible for my mother and ten-year-old brother. After my father's death our life became difficult as I was unemployed for about two and half years, but then finally five months ago I saw a job advertisement in one of the Facebook groups which I'm a member of. They were searching for a waiter to work in a famous restaurant in our city. I was so enthusiastic and applied for the job.

Two months later, and after successfully passing two interviews, finally I got the job of a waiter in that restaurant. The job is good, but I'm starting to get annoyed by some of the customers - especially big families. I mean those customer who bring young children with them to the restaurant! I don't mind having to clean up after them - I understand that children sometimes make a mess. But why do parents allow their children to run around like crazy in a restaurant? It's actually quite dangerous, and I get very nervous because I always have to carry trays full of food.

Two weeks ago, a little boy crashed into me, and I dropped a bowl of soup on the floor. And guess what? His parents actually started complaining loudly and calling me 'stupid'! I felt very sad that I burst into tears. Later, I told the owner of the restaurant, but he just said I should be patient. As for the other waiters, they just laughed! I felt very angry and started to lose patience. So I was seriously thinking of leaving the restaurant to look for another job.

Yesterday I was shopping in a nearby mall when I met my old friend, Yasir. I was surprised to know that Yasir had become a food and catering manager in a big hotel. He told me that he started his career as a chef in a small restaurant and worked so hard for more than ten years to get this position. In fact, Yasir's words had a very positive effect on me and I realized that I was a bit impatient. I was so proud of my friend who could persuade me to stay in my current job and advised me not to leave it if I would like to have a successful career. Finally, I decided to give myself a second chance and I promised my friend to follow his advice.

Task One: For each item, write a short answer (not more than Four WORDS).

- 1 When was Amir born?
- 2 How many people are in Amir's family?
.....
- 3 How long has Amir been working as a waiter?
.....
- 4 Who was responsible for dropping the soup in the restaurant?
.....
- 5 Where does Yasir work now?
.....
- 6 What advice did Yasir give to Amir?
.....

Task Two: For each item, shade in the bubble next to the correct option.

- 7 Two years ago, Amir had job.
- a good
 - an annoying
 - no
- 8 Amir read about the job
- on TV
 - in the newspaper
 - on the web
- 9 He is annoyed when children in the restaurant.

Exercise 4 (Reading)

Read the text. Then complete the tasks.

The ancient Greeks first had the idea of getting men together every four years to hold and witness sporting events. The idea was to have the best athletes from all over Greece gather in one field and compete every four years. The athletes came together in the town of Olympia for a few days to compete in a few events, mostly related to warfare (throwing the javelin, running, wrestling, boxing and chariot racing).

The first written reference to the Games is 776 BC. However, they lasted only until 393 AD. It took 1503 years for the Olympics to return. The first modern Olympics were held in 1896. Since then, they have been held every four years in different cities around the world.

The Olympic Games have many important symbols that most people recognize. The five rings that appear on the Olympic flag (coloured yellow, green, blue, black and red) were introduced in 1914. They represent the five continents of Africa, the Americas, Australia, Asia and Europe. The Olympic torch, a major part of the ancient Games, was brought back in 1928 and is carried with great fanfare and publicity to the host city, Amsterdam, where it is kept burning until the close of the Games. The torch symbolises purity and the struggle for victory.

Those who came in second or third got nothing. Interestingly, when the Games started again in 1896, silver medals were given to the first place winners. Later in 1904 in the St. Louis Games, gold was the top prize. Now, of course we have gold for first place, silver for second and bronze for third.

Although the ancient Games had only a few events, foot racing was in every game and each race had a variety of lengths - the longest being the marathon named after the Greek city and famous battle. The pentathlon had five events (running, jumping, wrestling, discus and javelin throwing) which were all scored together. Boxing was one of the oldest events in the Games.

Today, of course, the Games are more exciting because there are many more events and variety of competitions. Athletes compete or play against each other in hopes of winning. Throughout the Games, the players are supposed to play with a spirit of sportsmanship. This means that they are to play with honour, seeking only to do their very best in their sport, and not specifically to defeat the other players.

Exercise 5 (Reading)

Read the text. For each item, shade in the bubble next to the correct option.

Researchers think that the annual medical cost for lung cancer, heart disease, and other illnesses connected to smoking is between 12 and 35 million pounds. And smoking costs society money in other ways. A recent research about smoking shows that between 27 and 61 billion pounds are spent each year on sick days when people don't go to work, on wages that you don't get when you don't go to work, and on work lost at the company when you are sick. There are 1.1 billion smokers in the world today, according to a new study by the World Health Organization (WHO). The study states that the number of smokers is expected to rise by 500 million smokers in 2025.

The damaging effects of smoking on our health are well known, and governments are controlling tobacco advertising to reduce the number of smokers. However, the number of teens and adults who smoke continue to grow at a higher rate in many countries. For example, 60% of Indonesian teenagers are regularly exposed to smoke at home, and about 35% of adult are smoking.

Although Indonesia's Health Ministry has carried out anti-smoking campaigns to reduce smoking; the first in 2016 and the latest was launched two years later, the campaign messages are not persuasive enough. As a result, the number of smokers haven't go down. Researchers argue that designing anti-smoking campaign messages based on tried and tested health communication theories will make the messages more powerful.

Indonesian experts think that there should be a variety of approaches to designing health messages. Aside from the fixed type of health campaigns the government currently uses, which highlight fear and sadness due to risks of smoking, several social influence approaches can be used to develop effective messages.

Exercise 5 (Reading)

Read the text. For each item, shade in the bubble next to the correct option.

A Plastic Ocean is a film to make you think. Think, and then act. We need to take action on our dependence on plastic. We've been producing plastic in huge quantities since the 1940s. Drink bottles, shopping bags, toiletries and even clothes are made with plastic. We live in a world full of plastic, and only a small proportion is recycled. What happens to all the rest? This is the question the film A Plastic Ocean answers. It is a documentary that looks at the impact that plastic waste has on the environment. Spoiler alert: the impact is devastating.

The film begins as a journey to film the largest animal on the planet, the blue whale. But during the journey the filmmakers (two environmental activists) make the shocking discovery of a huge, thick layer of plastic floating in the middle of the Indian Ocean. This prompts them to travel around the world to look at other areas that have been affected. In total, they visited 20 locations around the world during the four years it took them to make the film. The documentary premiered in 2016, and is now on streaming services such as Netflix.

It's very clear that a lot of research went into the film. There are beautiful shots of the seas and marine life. These are contrasted with scenes of polluted cities and dumps full of plastic rubbish. We see how marine species are being killed by all the plastic we are dumping in the ocean. The message about our use of plastic is painfully obvious.

But the film doesn't only present the negative side. In the second half, the filmmakers look at what we can do to reverse the tide of plastic flowing around the world. They present short-term and long-term solutions. These include avoiding plastic containers and 'single-use' plastic products as much as possible. Reuse your plastic bags and recycle as much as you can. The filmmakers also stress the need for governments to work more on recycling programmes, and look at how technology is developing that can convert plastic into fuel.

We make a staggering amount of plastic. In terms of plastic bags alone, we use five hundred billion worldwide annually. Over 300 million tons of plastic are produced every year, and at least 8 million of those are dumped into the oceans. The results are disastrous, but it isn't too late to change. Once you've seen A Plastic Ocean, you'll realise the time is now and we all have a role to play.

Task One: For each item, write a short answer (not more than Four WORDS).

1 Who made the film A Plastic Ocean?

2 How long did they take to make the film?

3 When did A Plastic Ocean first appeared?

Greenland, the world's largest island, lying in the North Atlantic Ocean. The people of Greenland are primarily Inuit (Eskimo). It has a small population of 56,000. Many of these 'Greenlanders' live close to the coastline because a large part of the country is covered with ice and glaciers. More than a quarter of all the people live in the capital, Nuuk. Fishing and seal hunting are the traditional industries. But fishing is the biggest industry that provide the most jobs. While tourism and oil are modern great industries that appeared in the 1990s. However, the country imports much more than it exports. But now life is changing obviously for many Greenlanders due to the weather.

Scientists believe that the world's climate is warming up and is clearly affecting Greenland. For example, small icebergs – about the size of city buses – are floating near to the coast. They have broken off from much larger areas of ice further out in the ocean because the temperature changed. Furthermore, the huge sheet of ice which covers Greenland is shrinking by about 75 cubic kilometres each year. If all of Greenland's ice melted, sea levels across the world would rise by 7.5 metres.

One industry that is benefiting from the melting ice is the oil industry. Nowadays, the sea around the west coast of Greenland has no ice for six months of the year. This means oil companies can explore this area. They plan to drill for oil in the next few years. Greenlanders have mixed feelings about this modern development. The country's prime minister, Kuupik Kleist, explains the issue: 'The Arctic people are the ones most exposed to climate change but we need a strong economy and we have to make use of the opportunities that oil could bring us ... we don't have any other natural resources as better as oil.'

Farming will also change. The growing season is longer with spring arriving earlier and longer summers. On the one hand, if the country produced more of its own food, it wouldn't need to import so much. On the other hand, some farmers are worried. They are afraid of the drier summers which might create new problems. For example, last year, it was so dry, farmers produced half the normal amount of food. The farmers and their families celebrate the beginning of the growing season annually before the summer begins. After dinner, they sing traditional song which is about the importance of summer. In the past, the winters were long and the summers were short. As nature and the weather changes in Greenland, I wondered if they would still sing this song in a hundred years' time. They might not.

Task 1: For each item, write a short answer (not more than FOUR WORDS).

Many people believe that Japanese people are very serious and hard-working. It's true that working too much, even to the point of death, is still a big problem in Japan. However, Japanese people are very cheerful and know well how to enjoy their free time. In addition, Japanese people are incredibly nice and polite.

I arrived here in Japan three months ago. I thought I would see only workaholic people just as robots all over the country. But, this was far from reality. I met very kind and gentle personalities who respect others, especially foreigners. Of course, there was some difficulties at the beginning in coping with a new culture and way of life. However, things here in Japan went very well.

Now I'm living in Chibu, which is a small Japanese town just a ninety-minute train ride away from central Tokyo. It's in a mostly agricultural region, where people grow vegetables and rice. But their main product is the Chibu tea which is famous worldwide. It is grown on the surrounding hills and sold all over the world most of the year.

Chibu is a very quite place, with not much going on, but every December the town comes to life for a few days during the Chibu Night Festival, which is considered one of Japan's top three festivals.

The best time to visit the festivals is on its third and final day. In the afternoon, six huge floats, each representing one of the areas of the town, are pulled through the streets to the main square. Each of these floats is decorated with lamps, wooden statues and brightly coloured cloth. For the spectators, there are hundreds of stalls lining the streets, all selling excellent food, which is very good value for money. Then, in the evening, from 7.30 until 10 O'clock, a long and spectacular fireworks show is held, which can be seen from many places in the town. If you have any difficulty seeing the show, you can always watch it on giant TV screen outside the main railway station.

During the festival, the normally quiet town is crowded with people, and all Chibu hotels are full, so many visitors prefer to keep their hotels in Tokyo and visit the festival from there (The last train back to Tokyo leaves just before midnight) I really enjoyed this fantastic festival. However, it is very cold here as temperatures sometimes drop well below freezing and I have to wear warm clothes all the time.

Stephen William Hawking was an English theoretical physicist, cosmologist, author, and director of research at the Centre for Theoretical Cosmology at the University of Cambridge. Hawking was born on January 1942 ,8. At an early age, he showed an interest in science and technology. Although known at school as "Einstein", Hawking was not initially successful academically. With time, he began to show considerable aptitude for scientific subjects and decided to read mathematics at university. Hawking's father advised him to study medicine instead of mathematics, concerned that mathematics graduates had few jobs.

At university, Hawking was diagnosed with motor neurone disease. He fell into a depression – though his doctors advised that he continue with his studies, he felt there was little point. His disease progressed more slowly than doctors had predicted. Although Hawking had difficulty walking unsupported, and his speech was almost unintelligible, an initial diagnosis that he had only two years to live proved unfounded. With his Doctoral advisor's encouragement, he returned to his work. Hawking started developing a reputation for brilliance when he publicly challenged the work of the noted Yorkshire astronomer, Fred Hoyle, and his student Jayant Narlikar at a lecture in June 1964.

His scientific work included research on the origins and structure of the universe, from the Big Bang to black holes. Stephen's greatest scientific achievement was a discovery about black holes in 1974 that shook the world of physics. Fourteen years later, Hawking wrote A Brief History of Time, a landmark in science writing, which sold over 10 million copies and was translated into dozens of languages. Its extraordinary success led to more books, including a series for children Stephen co-authored with his daughter Lucy.

Hawking was a fellow of the Royal Society (FRS), a lifetime member of the Pontifical Academy of Sciences, and a recipient of the Presidential Medal of Freedom, the highest civilian award in the United States. In 2002, Hawking was ranked number 25 in the BBC's poll of the 100 Greatest Britons. He was the Professor of Mathematics at the University of Cambridge between 1979 and 2009 and achieved commercial success with works of popular science in which he discusses his own theories.

Hawking's illness gradually paralyzed him over the decades. However, even after the loss of his speech, he was still able to communicate through a speech-generating device, initially through the use of a hand-held switch, and eventually by using a single cheek muscle. He died on 14 March 2018 at the age of 76.

Lionel Andrés Messi , born on 24 June 1987, is an Argentine footballer who currently plays for Barcelona and the Argentine national team. He is one of the best football players of his generation and is frequently considered as the world's best contemporary player. Lionel Messi, whose playing style and ability have drawn comparisons to Diego Maradona, received Ballon d'Or and FIFA World Player of the Year nominations by the age of 21 and won both by the age of 22. Diego Maradona once declared that Messi was his "successor."

Lionel Messi's talent was early detected by his father. When he began playing with the local team, his potential was quickly identified by Barcelona . At the age of 11, he was diagnosed with a growth hormone deficiency, which is a medical condition in which the body does not produce enough growth hormone and whose treatment needs a lot of money.

He left Rosario-based Newell's Old Boys's youth team in 2000 and moved with his family to Europe, as Barcelona offered treatment for his growth hormone deficiency. Making his debut in the 05–2004 season, he broke the La Liga record for the youngest footballer to play a league game, and also the youngest to score a league goal.

Major honours soon followed as Barcelona won La Liga in Messi's debut season, and won a double of the league and Champions League in 2006. His breakthrough season was in 07-2006; he became a first team regular, scoring a hat-trick in El Clásico and finishing with 14 goals in 26 league games. Perhaps his most successful season was the 09-2008 season, in which Messi scored 38 goals to play an integral part in a treble-winning campaign.

Messi was the top scorer of the 2005 FIFA World Youth Championship with six goals, including two in the final game. Shortly thereafter, he became an established member of Argentina's senior international team. In 2006, he became the youngest Argentine to play in the FIFA World Cup and he won a runners-up medal at the Copa América tournament the following year. In 2008, in Beijing, he won his first international honour, an Olympic gold medal, with the Argentina Olympic football team.

In 2012 Messi hit the absolute heights. He scored 91 goals in a calendar year: 79 with Barça plus 12 with the Argentina national side. As such, the Argentine surpassed Gerd Müller's record of 85 goals from 1972. If we add in the 24 assists he made over the 12 months then we can say that Messi played a part in 115 goals in 2012: out of this world.

The Spanish flu, also known as the 1918 flu pandemic, was a deadly pandemic in recent history. It spread worldwide during the year 1919-1918. The virus infected 500 million people – about a third of the world's population at the time. Since it killed at least 50 million, scientists consider the Spanish flu to be the severest pandemic in human history.

The outbreak of the Spanish flu was caused by an H1N1 virus, which had genes of avian origin. Historians now believe that World War I could have been partly responsible for spreading the virus. Lack of hygiene and malnutrition may have also been responsible for weakening the immune system. For example, a 2007 analysis of medical journals from the period of the pandemic found that the viral infection was no more aggressive than previous influenza strains. Instead, malnutrition, overcrowded medical camps and hospitals, and poor hygiene, all caused by the recent war, promoted bacterial superinfection.

There is no agreement about the origin of the virus. The 1918 flu was first observed in Europe. Then, it appeared in the United States, and parts of Asia before swiftly spreading around the world. It is believed that politics was the main reason why this pandemic was referred to as the Spanish flu. During World War I, journalists minimized early reports of illness and deaths in Germany, the United Kingdom and the United States.

However, newspapers were free to report the epidemic's effects in neutral Spain. This gave rise to the name 'Spanish flu'.

Nearly a century after the Spanish flu struck, the World Health Organization (WHO) called on scientists, national authorities and the media to follow best practices in naming new human infectious diseases to minimize unnecessary negative effects on nations, economies, and people. More modern terms for this virus include the "1918 influenza pandemic," the "1918 flu pandemic," or variations of these.

It is interesting to note that most influenza outbreaks kill the very young and the very old, with a higher survival rate for those in between, but the Spanish flu pandemic resulted in a higher than expected death rate for young adults.

Like the Spanish flu, the coronavirus is also very contagious and spread quickly worldwide. There are however major differences. Both diseases are respiratory infections with common symptoms. Yet, they belong to different families of viruses. The coronavirus is more threatening to elderly people and those with pre-existing medical conditions. By contrast, the Spanish flu was most deadly for young adults.

During the Spanish flu, scientists couldn't isolate the particular virus type that caused the pandemic. Nowadays, with advanced scientific knowledge, the coronavirus was easily detected and vaccines are being developed by groups of scientists worldwide.

Task 1: For each item, write a short answer (not more than FOUR WORDS).
